Course Description and Objectives: This course is designed to provide graduate students of political science with a survey of the Latin American politics at both theoretical and empirical levels of analysis. It begins with an examination of the political and economic developments in Latin American societies during their capitalist development and state formation and their legacy for the state-society relations. The course then proceeds to the analysis of the rise of authoritarianism, transitions to democratic rule, the dynamics of economic liberalization, and the challenges of democratic consolidation in major countries of the region.

Course Requirements

1. Students are expected to come to the lectures having done the assigned readings beforehand.
2. Two critical essays (3-5 pages) summarizing and evaluating the reading material assigned for a given week. (1st essay due: 9 April, 2nd essay due: 14May.) Late essays will be marked down 3 points.
3. Starting in the 2nd week of classes, students will start presentations of the reading material and directing the discussions (by summarizing the major points in the reading material and raising questions for class discussion).
4. A term paper (appr. 20 pages- double spaced) to be handed in at the end of the term. Paper topics may include any issue relevant to understanding Latin American politics, but students are urged to discuss the selection of their topics with the instructor. Late papers will be penalized.

Breakdown of the Grades:

Two critical essays: 30 % (each 15 %)

Class participation and presentations: 30 % (10-10-10)

Term-paper: 40 %.
